Each season my interest of the NFL Draft grows and I try to gain more knowledge by studying more game film, reading and writing more scouting reports, and losing more sleep. This season, in a short amount of time, I created this brief NFL Draft Guide that hopefully will wet your appetite for the upcoming draft. Doing some side work for the Optimum Scouting network and my weekly columns for More Than A Fan, I crunched this thing out in just a few short weeks. I hope you enjoy and all types of feedback are welcome. Don't kill me over the mock draft though ;).

*Needs not in essential order.

NFC EAST

Dallas Cowboys RB - DT - OLB - S - CB
The offseason is surrounded by the loss of DeMarco Murray, so Dallas will need to fill immediately. Secondary help is much needed.

New York Giants OG - OT - LB - S - CB
The offensive line has been rough as of late, so don't be surprised if the Giants go with the unsexy pick at no. 9. Defense needs depth.

Philadelphia Eagles WR - OG - DE - OLB - S
Adding cornerback help in free agency was huge! Losing Maclin hurts; first round possibility for a new target. Lack a big-time pass rusher.

Washington Redskins QB - RT - OL - LB - S
This may be the last year to the short RG3 era, so his replacement is out there somewhere. The offensive line is filled with holes to fill (upgrade).

NFC NORTH

Chicago Bears QB - WR - NT - ILB - CB
Cutler is on his way out soon, so adding a new face could be addressed. Paea wasn't phenomenal, but enough to leave a big hole at nose tackle.

Detroit Lions RB - OG - RT - DT - CB
An effective running game would add a new element to this offense. Improving the o-line would be nice. Lost a lot of talent across d-line.

Green Bay Packers NT - DL - OLB - ILB - SS
Green Bay cut two inside linebackers this offseason knowing they must find the next guys this offseason. Clinton-Dix needs a partner at safety.

Minnesota Vikings RB - WR - OL - ILB - CB
Xavier Rhodes has played great, but needs a buddy at corner. The offensive line is bumpy and needs to protect the young quarterback.

NFC SOUTH

Atlanta Falcons RB - WR - OG - OLB - DB
Atlanta hasn't had a steady running game since letting go Michael Turner and the draft has many options in this year's class in every round.

Carolina Panthers RB - WR - OT - S - LB
Cam was beat up all last season, so a pair of sturdy tackles should be the primary goal. Some key targets in the passing game would also be nice.

New Orleans Saints QB - WR - TE - OLB - S
Since dealing Graham a vacancy opened up at tight end. Other options in the air would be great additions. An extra pass rusher is needed.

Tampa Bay Buccaneers QB - OG - OT - DE - S
McCown-out. Glennon-not the answer. Number one pick-?. Whomever the quarterback, some holes will need to be filled upfront for protection.

NFC WEST

Arizona Cardinals RB - WR - OG - S - CB
Some effective weapons on offense are needed, especially with lackluster quarterback play, which could be another position of need.

St. Louis Rams WR - OG - OT - C - DB
The Rams need a number one receiver to help out Nick Foles. The offensive line is sporadic and it wouldn't hurt to add some new pieces.

San Francisco 49ers RB - TE - DE - OLB - ILB
The domino effect took place in San Francisco this offseason, losing one player after the other. Linebackers are the biggest pressing need.

Seattle Seahawks WR - OG - C - DL - OLB
Some consistent and effective wideouts for Russell Wilson would be fun to watch. Adding some beef up front on both sides should be considered.

AFC EAST

Buffalo Bills QB - OT - OL - ILB - FS
Manuel wasn't the answer and you know Rex Ryan wants to bring in some new talent. The offensive line is still inconsistent across the board.

Miami Dolphins WR - OG - DT - LB - S
Can Jarvis Landry be a true No. 1 receiver? The Dolphins gave up the tenth most sacks a year ago, so some help should be provided there.

New England Patriots WR - OG - DT - LB - CB
Adding a top receiver would only be a luxury for Brady. The defense has some holes to fill upfront and for long-term purposes on the back-end.

New York Jets QB - RB - ILB - OLB - DB
The quarterback class isn't deep enough if New York can't land Winston or Mariota early. Need some playmakers on defense to add to Revis.

AFC NORTH

Baltimore Ravens QB - WR - TE - DE - CB
Baltimore will need to add some weapons that Flacco can throw to at both tight end and wideout. The secondary had many SOS moments...

Cincinnati Bengals WR - OL - DT - S - CB
A playmaker out wide that can compliment Green would be great to add. Need an upgrade at defensive tackle and some depth in the secondary.

Cleveland Browns QB - WR - TE - DE - NT
It's your call on the quarterback situation. Josh Gordon can't stay on the field, so adding a playmaker on offense would be nice. Need pass rush.

Pittsburgh Steelers QB - OT - OLB - S - CB
The ageless secondary has come and gone. Pittsburgh should address the secondary needs early. Adding depth on the o-line is always necessary.

AFC SOUTH

Houston Texans WR - C - OT - ILB - OLB
Hopkins is the only go-to wideout on the roster so adding more weapons is likely. Linebacker and offensive line depth should also be addressed.

Indianapolis Colts C - RT - DE - ILB - S
The offensive line was a bit inconsistent in 2014 and Harrison may not be the long-term answer at center. Defense needs to take the next step.

Jacksonville Jaguars RB - WR - OT - LB - FS
Jaguars gave up the most sacks in the NFL in 2014. Joeckel is fine, but more pieces are needed. A safety to partner with Cyprien would be great.

Tennessee Titans QB - OG - RT - DB - LB
It's your call on the quarterback. Some added depth on the o-line would be good along with some key contributors on back end of the defense.

AFC WEST

Denver Broncos WR - C - OT - DT - K
Thomas was tagged, so a potential replacement will be needed. Center has been a need the past few seasons. D-line has some holes to fill.

Kansas City Chiefs WR - OT - C - ILB - CB
You know the receiving woes (or QB woes) in 2014 and that will need to be fixed immediately. Inside linebackers need to be upgraded.

Oakland Raiders WR - TE - OT - DE - CB
Maybe Derek Carr can get a first round weapon unlike his brother received in Houston. Raiders were 31st in sacks forced in 2014.

San Diego Chargers QB - RB - C - NT - OLB
An immediate talent at running back is needed (possible first round choice). Need some help on the d-line with a poor rush defense in 2014.

1.

LEONARD WILLIAMS
DT/DE - USC - 6'5 - 303 - 4.97 - FIRST ROUND

7.67

First Round Grade

What I LIKE

I'm a sucker for versatile defensive linemen and Williams has the total package with that. A superior pass-rusher with physical tools and the ability to shed blocks with active hands and an unmovable body. A great athlete for his size with the ability to bull rush from the outside while also being a dominant run defender inside. Extremely powerful. Elite vision.

What I DON'T LIKE

Little to no major flaws but had a bad habit of getting too upright off the snap virtually eliminating himself from being any major factor on the play. Being a tall lineman, he tends to battle with leverage. Doesn't possess any intimidating rush moves off the edge relying more on physical traits and tools over skill. Gets in passing lanes, but rarely bats down passes.

My OVERVIEW

A versatile dominant lineman, Williams is an elite prospect oozing with All-Pro traits. Being that he can line up in an odd or even set Williams is ready to go once his name is called. Williams is an unblockable talent that dominated college football for three years versus every level of competition. His combination of size, speed, and athleticism is salivating. Top 3 pick.

2.

JAMES WINSTON
QB - FLORIDA STATE - 6'3 - 231 - 4.97 - FIRST ROUND

7.65

First Round Grade

What I LIKE

26-1 as a starter. Has the physical tools to excel at the next level with a big athletic frame, good pocket mobility, and a strong arm to deliver strikes downfield. Works well through his progressions and throws well on the run. Gets the ball out quickly and is generally a good decision maker. Dominated operating in a pro-style offense. Clutch.

What I DON'T LIKE

Constant non-football related issues that showed no growth in maturity off the field throughout his college career. Started off slow in many games in 2014. Interceptions increased by eight and QB rating dropped 39.3 points from freshman to sophomore season. Displayed many off-balanced throws in 2014 resulting in multiple interceptions.

My OVERVIEW

Immaturities aside, Winston is the most complete QB in the draft since Luck. He jumps off tape with superb physical tools. He possesses a rare skill set that scouts dream of with natural instincts, pocket awareness, a strong arm, and athleticism. Will have to answer questions about off the field issues, but is an elite talent on the field regardless.

3.

AMARI COOPER
WR - ALABAMA - 6'1 - 211 - 4.45 - FIRST ROUND

7.60

First Round Grade

What I LIKE

One of the better route runners in this class. Was consistently effective in every game in college. Ran a very diverse route tree lining up at every wideout position including the slot. Only slightly over 6'0", but effectively high points the football with soft but big 10-inch hands. Accelerates well underneath and over the top. Highly effective after the catch. A+ work ethic.

What I DON'T LIKE

Dealt with some series of drops in the 2014 season. He is a very crisp and solid route runner, but sometimes manages to stop routes. He doesn't have the desired height, but I am just being picky because neither does Jeremy Maclin, Antonio Brown, and Odell Beckham, Jr. but they are all just fine as number one receivers.

My OVERVIEW

Cooper is the complete package at wide receiver with good speed and physical tools to be a potential red-zone target. Cooper draws immediate attention to opposing defenses being an elite talent. Some will view him as a low ceiling guy, but what you're getting now is still pretty darn spectacular. Don't let his calm demeanor fool you.

4.

DEVANTE PARKER
WR - LOUISVILLE - 6'3 - 209 - 4.42 - FIRST ROUND

7.57

First Round Grade

What I LIKE

One of the better at tracking the ball and not giving away the ball to defenders. Great mixture of size and speed. A huge catch radius with 33.25 arms and snatches the ball out of the air high pointing the football. Can be very dangerous after the catch with the ability to dodge arm tackles and would-be tacklers. Best red-zone target in the draft.

What I DON'T LIKE

Being a long strider, Parker doesn't gain separation on straight-line speed and by not having any quick sudden moves to break away. Battled to stay on the field during college with a foot injury and his speed hasn't been the same since returning. Though being a big receiver, he struggles to win battles off the line in press coverage.

My OVERVIEW

His ability to snag the ball out of the air with a large catch radius and the ability to be a key factor in the red-zone makes him an intriguing and elite prospect. His strength isn't running by defenders, but will catch anything within a mile and will win every contested ball. The sure-handed receiver (credited with only 3 drops since 2013) is a quarterback's dream go-to-guy.

KEVIN WHITE
WR - WEST VIRGINIA - 6'2 - 215 - 4.35 - FIRST ROUND

7.56

First Round Grade

What I LIKE

Very productive in 2014 breaking out with eye-popping performances in big games. Seen as a straight-line speed guy in a high-powered offense, but has physical traits to trump the opposition. Very quick and twitchy off the line blowing by corners within the first few steps. High points the football with big hands and great leaping ability.

What I DON'T LIKE

Didn't have a very diverse route tree in college, but made the most of it. When not getting the initial edge off the line (could make an argument that he relies too much on physical ability), he can struggle gaining separation though running a 4.35 at the combine. Can be clumsy in footwork running with feet inward (pigeon-toed).

My OVERVIEW

Some may hit him as a possible one-hit wonder, but White had the same ability in 2013, but just became more effective for the Mountaineer offense in 2014. His combination of size and speed with natural hands makes coaches drool. He will need to be polished in a few areas, but may have the most upside of any prospect in this class.

DANNY SHELTON
DT - WASHINGTON - 6'2 - 339 - 5.64 - FIRST ROUND

7.55

First Round Grade

What I LIKE

Big man with the motor and intensity to give 100% on every play (virtually played every snap for Huskies). Though being inked as strictly a nose tackle, he has finesse traits being a superb run stuffer and can be an effective pass rusher. Can play on all downs. Extremely athletic being able to bend well and display nice agility. A+ strength.

What I DON'T LIKE

Has the ability to be an effective pass rusher, but the 2014 stats can be deceiving as many of the sacks came against inferior opponents. Banks strictly off physical ability and powerful strength (most nose tackles do) though not displaying many dominant moves. Seesawed weight in college; something that will be monitored at the next level.

My OVERVIEW

You have to be very picky if you want to find flaws in Shelton's overall game as he displays nice athleticism for his size, very aware of his surroundings (can struggle with cut blocks sometimes) and brings a competitive edge each play. His pure-power and elite effort in pursuit makes Shelton a fun prospect to watch on film.

7.

DANTE FOWLER, JR.
DE/OLB - FLORIDA - 6'2 - 261 - 4.60 - FIRST ROUND

7.53

First Round Grade

What I LIKE

Explosive physical beast that can set the edge with length, strong hands and speed. Very versatile lining up in many different areas for the Gators having great flexibility with great pass rush moves. Quick off the snap becoming very unblockable with his speed and power. Contagious intense attitude.

What I DON'T LIKE

Many times would over-pursue on tape when playing the "buck" with ball carriers sliding right by him. Not an extremely strong lower body seeing some tackles result in him getting knocked back before finishing the play. A bit of a mess sometimes when rushing the passer trying to do too much, so needs some work with technique.

My OVERVIEW

Whether lining up at outside linebacker or defensive end, Fowler has a knack at getting to the quarterback. He has a combination of moves, though not all perfected, with a powerful and explosive first move to give him an advantage off the snap. His versatility will only help him make that step while continuing to get stronger. Exciting.

TODD GURLEY
RB - GEORGIA - 6'1 - 222 - 4.52 - FIRST ROUND

7.50
 First Round Grade

COMPARABLE TO: Marshawn Lynch, Seahawks

What I LIKE

Does everything well. Can be shifty and powerful when need be while also being a homerun hitter in both the run game and the return game. Tremendous strength and will not get slowed down by arm tackles. North and south runner that rarely had negative plays in college. Reliable receiver Had only three fumbles in career on 510 carries.

What I DON'T LIKE

Obviously dealt with multiple injuries in college most notably the recent ACL injury in October of 2014. Only completed one full season due to either injury or suspension (played only 40% of offensive snaps over three seasons). Not an excellent pass protector. Concerns are real about coming back to full-speed whenever he makes his return.

My OVERVIEW

When healthy, Gurley was the best player in college football and if healthy, many could make a case as ranking him as the top prospect in the draft. Gurley has a rare combination of power and speed with amazing balance with control as a runner. If his injury report checks out, Gurley could be a potential "steal" on the 2015 NFL Draft.

BRANDON SCHERFF
OT/OG - IOWA - 6'4 - 319 - 5.05 - FIRST ROUND

7.48
 First Round Grade

COMPARABLE TO: David DeCastro, Steelers

What I LIKE

Powerful and effective blocker with insane strength throughout his frame. Fairly good athlete for his size that has good enough lateral quickness in the run game. A punishing blocker with a mean streak and plays hard until the whistle. Smart cerebral lineman that can read defenses and excels at picking up blitzes and extra pass rushers.

What I DON'T LIKE

Can rely too much on upper body strength, therefore losing leverage and balance in pass protection. Doesn't recover very well and isn't extremely quick picking up pass rushers off the edge, therefore projecting more as a guard. Many times got pushed around on bull rushers and gave too many opportunities for rusher to make a play.

My OVERVIEW

Scherff is a dominating run blocker with mean streak tendencies to pancake every potential on looker in the backfield. His style of play doesn't project as a tackle to the next level similarly to Zack Martin a year ago. Scherff has many attributes and abilities to excel at the next level with All-Pro potential as an interior lineman.

10.

MALCOM BROWN
DT - TEXAS - 6'2 - 319 - 5.05 - FIRST ROUND

7.46
 First Round Grade

COMPARABLE TO: Pat Sims, Bengals

What I LIKE

Displays the ability to penetrate and create disruption at the line and in the backfield. Will do whatever it takes to get the ball carrier while keeping eyes up with good play recognition skills. Shows quickness off the snap with power at the point of attack. Very well grounded and mature raising a family of his own.

What I DON'T LIKE

Doesn't have much of a collection of certain pass rush moves relying mostly on effort and power to get past the line (which isn't always a bad thing). Motor can run hot and cold once being double-teamed or not getting by on primary moves after the snap. Not as powerful as you would hope.

My OVERVIEW

Brown is a hard worker that is effective when giving 100%. He struggles the most when double-teamed in trying to find ways to get out of the situation. Brown displays many things to like including flexibility, initial penetration, and the play recognition. Brown has a nice ceiling of potential if selected into scheme that fits his style.

11.

LA'EL COLLINS
OT/OG - LSU - 6'4 - 305 - 5.12 - FIRST ROUND

7.45
 First Round Grade

COMPARABLE TO: Anthony Davis, 49ers

What I LIKE

A dominating run blocker with a strong base and strong hands that cannot be moved. Powerful off the snap with the ability to control oncoming run defenders by driving them out of the way creating nice running lanes. Not a great pass protector, but can lock out the defender when making contact with good length and above average strength.

What I DON'T LIKE

Isn't a quality pass blocking bookend especially on the left side. Sports a good enough base, but can battle with leverage issues allowing rushers to cut inside and get to the quarterback. Also concerning leverage, he tends to lunge forward too many times losing balance and effectiveness. Hand placement can be a mess in pass protection.

My OVERVIEW

Collins is a dominating run blocker, but could use some technique work in pass protection. Either way, Collins is a force at the point of attack driving defenders back eliminating them from the play. May project better as a guard being a good enough athlete with the ability to slide well and explode at the scene of action. Should be able to play right away at guard.

12.

RANDY GREGORY
DE/OLB - NEBRASKA - 6'5 - 235 - 4.64 - FIRST ROUND

7.44
 First Round Grade

COMPARABLE TO: George Selvie, Giants

What I LIKE

A long athletic defender that can chase down ball carriers with adequate speed in pursuit. Even though lean, shows good power and strength to take out opposing offensive tackles. Versatile across the line being able to rush the quarterback at every position occasionally dropping back in coverage. Extremely quick of the edge and fast with inside moves.

What I DON'T LIKE

Not as explosive as you would expect. Doesn't have good first step quickness compared to other top edge rushers. Has difficult time in converting speed to power when not initially coming clean off the end. Fairly weak lower frame that is exposed during run plays not being able to anchor down. Dealt with multiple marijuana incidents in school, though admits to his faults.

My OVERVIEW

With a nice mixture of size, length, and athleticism, Gregory has the elite potential to be a dominating 4-3 defensive end or a standup 3-4 outside linebacker in the NFL. Getting stronger throughout his lean body will be key for his success at the next level while continuing to stay grounded with recent drug related incidents.

13.

SHANE RAY
DE/OLB - MISSOURI - 6'2 - 245 - 4.64 - FIRST ROUND

7.43
 First Round Grade

COMPARABLE TO: Jerry Hughes, Bills

What I LIKE

Unbelievable quickness off the edge with an always hot motor. Elite first step quickness. Solid flexibility being able to drop his shoulder and end to be an effective pass rusher off the edge. Only has a few rush moves in his toolkit but executes them to perfection. Change of direction speed is top-notch. Loves the game of football.

What I DON'T LIKE

Continued to get locked up by bigger and more mobile offensive tackles. Doesn't have a collection of pass rush moves. Not a desired length for the position of an outside pass rusher on the line. Lacks lower body strength and on film it hurts him in the run game.

My OVERVIEW

Ray may be the best pure pass rusher in the draft with a drooling set of traits consisting of incredible quickness, solid tackling ability, and a constant motor. Ray has a knack for causing havoc in the backfield and will get to the quarterback no matter what scheme. His length is the biggest concern, but it will be hard to pass on a player of his caliber due to just that one issue.

14.

MARCUS MARIOTA
QB - OREGON - 6'3 - 222 - 4.52 - FIRST ROUND

7.42
 First Round Grade

COMPARABLE TO: Alex Smith, Chiefs

What I LIKE

His athleticism speaks volumes with the ability to make plays on the ground. Thrives throwing the ball on the run and is durable (played hurt many times). Even in a pre-determined passing offense, he goes through progressions and rarely makes foolish errors. Can spin it into tight windows and is a pass first quarterback.

What I DON'T LIKE

Doesn't have elite pocket presence and steps out of the pocket prematurely. I don't like how people damn him immediately just because of the offense he plays in, but it is a factor when making the jump. Arm strength has been questioned downfield. Possesses some mechanical issues. Fumbled 27 times in career

My OVERVIEW

He'll have to learn a more complex playbook, but is capable of doing so due to his high football IQ. Will be instantly tested in reading coverages and may have some hiccups in his early years (who doesn't?). His size, athleticism and character, on and off the field, are his greatest assets. Don't let his soft-spoken self convince you he is not 15.

VIC BEASLEY

7.42

OLB - CLEMSON - 6'3 - 246 - 4.53 - FIRST ROUND

First Round Grade

COMPARABLE TO: Jarvis Jones, Steelers

What I LIKE

Tremendous first step quickness with many instances not even being touched by the opposing tackle. A primary pass rusher with a knack to get into the backfield every play (elite production in career: 33 sacks & 59.5 TFLs). Good flexibility off the edge dipping his shoulder with fluid hips. Quick strong hands. Loves everything football.

What I DON'T LIKE

Has a hard time converting speed to power. More of just a straight line pass rusher not carrying a big suitcase full of pass rush moves. Takes enough bad angles on run plays to count as something he needs to work on. Played at a very slim 220 lbs. at Clemson and it showed by not having that strength and power to anchor the edge.

My OVERVIEW

Beasley is and should be viewed as a primary pass rusher as a 3-4 outside linebacker. From just a raw pass rushing point of view, Beasley is one of the best I have ever "scouted". He has the speed and explosive quickness off the snap to cause opposing offenses to run things to the opposite side. If in the right scheme, we could be looking at the player in the draft a few years from now.

ANDRUS PEAT

7.42

OT - STANFORD - 6'7 - 313 - 5.18 - FIRST ROUND

First Round Grade

COMPARABLE TO: Andrew Whitworth, Bengals

What I LIKE

Carries his weight well at 6'7" 313 lbs. with a pair of tree trunks at his bottom half. Shows good hand placement in bot run and pass protection. Incredibly powerful with the ability to show explosiveness off the snap. Very light on his feet and runs well. Shows good balance and leverage.

What I DON'T LIKE

Wish he was more powerful in the run game as his size indicates. Receives more of the contact instead of lashing it out, but on the other hand will lean too far into pass rushers giving way by becoming unbalanced. Could be considered as a "soft" blocker not having that nasty streak you want in a first round selection.

My OVERVIEW

A massive prospect, Peat is a force at left tackle. He is a big powerful lineman that has superior strength and is light on his feet for his size with good agility. Peat has some technique issues he needs to work on, but looks to be a solid NFL contributor in his first season.

17.

MARCUS PETERS

7.42

CB - WASHINGTON - 5'11 - 197 - 4.53 - FIRST ROUND

First Round Grade

COMPARABLE TO: Aqib Talib, Broncos

What I LIKE

Thick framed throughout his body that is utilized well in a press coverage scheme. Fluidity throughout the hips and is good in change of direction. Very aware when the ball is in the air. Tremendous ball skills contending on every pass with his receiver winning most 50/50 balls. Passionate about the game; plays with confidence.

What I DON'T LIKE

Repetition of encounters with coaches that eventually led to his dismissal. Also was suspended due to a personal foul outburst in 2014 before being officially kicked off the team. Flagged with many personal foul penalties being too grabby and physical at the wrong times. Isn't a great closer on the ball and isn't as mellow in coverage as most corners in the draft.

My OVERVIEW

To bluntly put it, the fate of Peters in the 2015 NFL Draft will come down to the decision on whether a team wants to risk a first round pick on him with his rejecting incidents at Washington. Peters is a very skilled and talented cover corner with great size and bulk, ball skills, and a swagger that is appreciated in the game today.

18.

MELVIN GORDON III

7.42

RB - WISCONSIN - 6'0 - 215 - 4.52 - FIRST ROUND

First Round Grade

COMPARABLE TO: Jamaal Charles, Chiefs

What I LIKE

Possesses some the best acceleration out if any player in the draft. Smooth in transitioning from inside to outside runs with impressive burst and great agility. Has the ability to break off a big play each time he touches the football (40 runs of at least 15 yards in 2014). Out runs and runs by defenders with natural moves to break and allude tacklers. Improved receiver.

What I DON'T LIKE

He's a thick speedster, but doesn't have that desired power for a every down back. Lacks ideal bulk in the lower body as it shows on film (easily tripped up on lower half contact). Dealt with fumbling issues at the conclusion of 2014. Hands are suspect in the passing game. His pass-protection will need some work at the next level.

My OVERVIEW

Overall, Gordon is an effective back doing most of his destruction in the open field with phenomenal burst and acceleration separating himself from defenders. Gordon will project to the league as a first and second down back due to his just average pass protection skills and not being an effective receiver. With a little polishing, Gordon has nice potential to become a potent back in the NFL.

19.

TRAE WAYNES

7.41

CB - MICHIGAN STATE - 6'0 - 186 - 4.31 - FIRST ROUND

First Round Grade

COMPARABLE TO: Desmond Trufant, Falcons

What I LIKE

Played 36 games and started 27. Mentally tough corner that thrives in man-to-man coverage creating his own island. Great recovery speed shown on tape and at combine(4.31). Good tackler with some pop. Isn't afraid to come up and make a play in the run game. Makes every receiver work hard to get open with good length and leverage.

What I DON'T LIKE

Yes, he highly contends with every receiver on every route, but can lose the battle due to his very lean body build and lacking ideal strength. In a league that is very pass interference happy, he will struggle in avoiding flags. Can fail to run end over end losing balance and could be viewed as clumsy on his feet. Allows too much cushion underneath.

My OVERVIEW

Overall, Waynes should develop into a nice starter in the league for many years. His specialty is a bump and run type game that shows his closing speed and his ability to stay stride for stride with the nation's fastest receivers. Waynes plays extremely confident which is what you want in today's NFL. His biggest issue is being too grabby.

20.

ERIC KENDRICKS

7.41

LB - UCLA - 6'0 - 232 - 4.61 - FIRST ROUND

First Round Grade

COMPARABLE TO: Bobby Wagner, Seahawks

What I LIKE

Very instinctive player that is already around the football on every play. Diagnoses quickly and attacks quickly on the football. Explosive hitter that will tackle though the ball carrier with good form. Good agility, flexibility and balance to stay on the field all three downs. Productive college player with 310 solo tackles over a four-year career.

What I DON'T LIKE

With his inferior size and strength he struggled getting through the line when not being able to avoid blockers with his elite agility. Can become overly aggressive getting into some suspect areas in passing downs. Could become more effective at meeting the runner in the backfield on a consistent basis.

My OVERVIEW

Like his older NFL brother Mychal, Eric is very instinctive and aggressive and plays with chip on his shoulder. Knows the game as well as any player in the 2015 NFL Draft and it shows on the field. Some will use his smaller frame as a reason to kick him out of the first round, but you can't ignore his instincts, physical play style, and aggressiveness.
